What is happening here?

What we have just seen is an example of compound nouns being formed. That is when two separate nouns are placed together to tell us something about a single object.

You will notice that :-

- (1) The relationship is signified by adding a suffix which will consist of a vowel.
- (2) The suffix is added to the second word
- (3) Where the word ends with a vowel a buffer “ı” is used to separate the two vowels.
- (4) The words are written separately ie not joined together

Üçüncü bölüm: compound nouns and vowel harmony :

Our first two examples both ended with the letter i :

lamba düğmesi and kapı zili

It is not the case that the all compound nouns will end with an “ı”. Let’s try another example.
